Our office has received the following updated information from the Director of Communications, NJ Department of Human Services, on plans to pay February's SNAP benefits early amid the government shutdown:

Attached is a flyer with the most updated information on plans to pay February's SNAP benefits early amid the government shutdown. Approximately 730,000 people in New Jersey depend on this critical assistance. As it stands now, the February SNAP benefits should be paid on Thursday, January 17. It is important that families know these are the February benefits and they should budget with that in mind. At this time, the NJ Department of Human Services has no assurances that any additional funding will be available for March.
