Tenafly High School Student Chaeyoung Lee Accepted to NJ Governor's School of Sciences

Competitive summer program focuses on STEM for high-achieving students that will benefit them as individuals and benefit the State by preparing students to enter high-demand fields

For Immediate Release

Tenafly, NJ – May 3, 2021 – Tenafly High School is celebrating the acceptance of junior Chaeyoung Lee to The New Jersey Governor's School in the Sciences to be held at Drew University.

Established in 1983, The Governor's School of New Jersey is a tuition-free, summer, residential program for high-achieving high school seniors who have an interest in STEM (science, technology, engineering, and mathematics) subjects. Currently, there are two programs: the Governor's School in the Sciences at Drew University and the Governor's School of Engineering & Technology at Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey. The highly competitive program welcomes students from all over the state.

"I was very excited to learn that I had been accepted," said Lee. "Science is my passion, and the chance to study science and participate in research at this level will be so rewarding and help me define what I want to study in college."

The program introduces scholars to a hands-on research experience in a student's area of interest through a series of courses, laboratories, projects, lectures, and other activities centered on math and science. Students work with professors in Drew University's undergraduate science program, learning about possible career paths from the faculty and from some of New Jersey's leading industrial, governmental, and academic representatives. The program also focuses on students' ethical, social, and civic responsibilities.
