

Tenaflly's Ethan Dicturel voted as N.J.'s top boys lacrosse sophomore

Updated Jun 01, 2021; Posted May 26, 2021

By Brandon Gould | NJ Advance Media for NJ.com and Mike Kinney | NJ Advance Media for NJ.com

Tenaflly's Ethan Dicturel was voted as New Jersey's top boys lacrosse sophomore, collecting more than 32,000 votes.

Dicturel has been an impact player for Tenaflly, picking up 58 ground balls so far this spring. Tenaflly is having its best season in program history and will host its first home playoff game on Tuesday.

Sophomore slump?

First of all, physically impossible since no one in the Class of 2023 got a chance to play varsity lacrosse until a month ago. But even if these youngsters had participated in 2020, you can bet that most here would have been able to dodge that common drop in productivity that can follow a surprisingly strong debut .

This special group acclimated itself quickly to the speed of varsity lacrosse despite very little time to prepare, and their contributions have been significant.

Some have generated eye-opening numbers as offensive playmakers, faceoff men, goalies or ground ball-gobbling poles, and others have caught our attention by making subtler but equally important contributions for the state's more renowned programs.

In the third of a four-part series, NJ Advance Media highlights the top sophomores and asks you, the fans, to vote for which players you think are the best. Scroll down to see the top sophomores and then cast your vote at the bottom. The poll closes on Tuesday, June 1.